Radicals Family proud of pledge support to Khamenei

TEHRAN, June 10, (Agencies): Hardimers have pledged support for Iran's new supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei as the country seeks to project an image of political harmony after the death of Ayatollah Khomeini. Khamenei, who is also President, a mainly ceremonial post, called on rival factions within the clerical leadership to bury differences and unite in rebuilding the country.

The government declared tomorrow a holiday and urged Iranians to attend ceremonies at Khomeini's grave at Tehran's Behesht-e-Zahra cemetery to once again renew allegiance with the ever-lasting aspirations of the late leader."

Thousands of mourners are marching to the graveside from Teachers and students from the theological school in Qom, which was Khomeini's base in his teaching years, are walking the 138-km (80 mile) route in a procession several kilometres (miles) long, the official news agency IRNA reported. Khamenei, 49, received a boost yesterday when hardline Interior Minister Hojatoleslam Ali Akbar Mohtashemi and provincial governors-general called on him and pledged their support.

Mohtashemi, who appoints

the governors, has in the past disagreed with Khamenei on foreign policy and economic issues.

"The President expressed the hope that with the will of God the vacuum will be filled. He said all must put aside their differences of opinion and personal motives and work towards an all-out co-operation," IRNA reported.

Khamenei was selected to succeed Khomeini as supreme leader on June 4, a day after the leader of Iran's 1979 Islamic revolution died of a heart attack at the age of 86. He was selected by the 83-member Assembly of Experts, chosen by Khomeini in the early days of the revolution to determine his succession. It was initially reported it would be a caretaker appointment, but Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said on Thursday it would be perman-

Syria backs Arab efforts

Shelling kills 4 in Lebanon

BEIRUT, June 10, (Agencies): Syrian and Christian gunners traded rocket and artillery fire today, killing four people and wounding 11 as Arab officials shuttled from Beirut to Damascus and Baghdad seeking to halt three months of renewed bloodshed.

Three Arab foreign ministers left Damascus for Baghdad today after winning Syrian backing for their plans to bring peace to Lebanon.

A police spokesman said the Syrians, entrenced in Muslim West Beirut, blasted the Christian coastline north of Beirut with 130mm howitzer shells and 107mm rockets. One round struck a residential district around the port of Jounieh, 12 I-2 miles (20 kilometres) north of Five other civilians, he added, were wounded in a retaliatory barrage on West Beirut during which Christian units under Gen. Michel Aoun opened up with 155mm howitzers.

Thuds of exploding shells shook the capital as Lakhdar Ibrahimi, an Arab League envoy, shuttled twice between the Christian and Muslim sectors for talks with Aoun, who heads the Christian cabinet in Lebanon's dual government, and Selim Hoss, his Muslim rival.

Emerging from talks with Aoun in the underground bunker of the bomb-ravaged presidential palace in suburban Baabda, Ibrahimi said: "My contacts aim at stabilising the ceasefire, lifting the blockades and reopening crossings" bet-ween Muslim and Christian sectors of Beirut.

The foreign ministers arrived in Baghdad, Iraq, today after three days of talks in Damascus with Syrian President Hafez Assad and Foreign Minister Farouq Al Sharaa who reportedly pledged to assist their mis-

Prince Saud Al Faisal of Saudi Arabia, Abdel Latif Al Filali of Morocco and Bouallam Bessayeh of Algeria met with their counterpart Tariq Aziz on arrival in Iraq.

President Saddam Hussein said today that Iraq supported the mission of three Arab foreign ministers.

Baghdad television said he told the three ministers that Iraq backed their mission, appreciated their efforts and sincerely wished them success.

Bessayeh told reporters the ministers' mission in Damascus was "fruitful."

The independent Beirut daily newspaper An Nahar said the Arab foreign ministers were soliciting support for a seven-point settlement proposal. The plan, according to the paper, calls for "exerting international pressure on Israel to withdraw its forces from south Lebanon.

Al Seyassah adds: The US has told Syria that it will support Damascus against Aoun if Syria secures the release of American hostages and closes down the offices of Abu Nidal.

Dubai probes Iranian's murder

DUBAI, June 10, (AP): Police today were investigating the murder of a dissident Iranian colonel shot dead in his hotel room, informed sources said.

They said retired Col.
Ataollah Bayahmadi, 52, was murdered in his room at Dubai's Excelsior Hotel last week while on a trip from Europe.

A group of men barged into his room in the hotel and shot him several times with a Colt revolver equipped with a silencer, said the sources, who spoke on condition they not be named.

The Excelsior is a moderately priced hotel in the downtown of this southern Gulf transportation hub.

Police are trying to determine whether the murder was politically motivated, since the men who fired the shots were said to be Iranians, said the sources.

The assassination was first reported by the Arab Times quoting Paris-based Iranian opposition figure Dr Manucher Ghanji.

Ghanji told the Arab Times that Bayahmadi was bead of the counter-espionage service in the Iranian Army under the late

Scientists fear similar disaster like Chernobyl

CAMBRIDGE, Massachusetts, June 10, (UPI): The Chernobyl nuclear reactor exploded like an atomic bomb during the 1986 disaster and scientists fear a similar catastrophe could again strike the Soviet Union, a technical journal said.

The conclusion of the report in the July 1989 issue of the journal Technology Review differs from a steam explosion theory and blamed poor design and 'cocky' technicians for the catastrophe.

"This damage set the stage for a second explosion, almost certainly was a full-fledged nuclear explosion," according to the journal, published at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The US Energy Department was quite certain the second explosion was a 'pure nuclear excursion' or burst of built-up energy, the journal said.

Thirty-one people, including plant workers and firelighters, died within days of the April 1986 accident. At least 200 suffered radiation sickness.

As many as 28,000 people in the Soviet Union, Europe and Asia could eventually die of cancer caused in part by radiation from the accident, scientists fear.

The journal explained several defects in the Chernobyl reactor's design led to an increase in fission and ultimately the reactor roaring out of control. Fission is the splitting of atoms to create energy and is the reaction that powers nuclear power plants. "Until now, it has been widely accepted that a nobyl," the journal said. "The Nuclear Regulatory Commission agrees with this explanation. Many groups, however, are now convinced that the explosion was nuclear."

But a nuclear regulatory commission official disputed the report. "I don't think you can call it a nuclear explosion or an atomic explosion," said Themis Speis, the agency's deputy director of

Police arrest Seoul students

SEOUL, June 10, (AP): Police arrested 1,000 people today as radical students battled riot police with rocks, clubs and firebombs, demanding the over-throw of President Roh Tae-Woo and the expulsion of US troops.

Opposition leader Kim Dae-Jung threatened popular unrest if Roh does not hold a promised referendum on his presidency. Violence erupted in parts of central Seoul when students hurled rocks and bricks at riot police who tried to stop the protest. Police fired tear-gas and made baton charges to disperse protesters as afternoon shoppers ran for cover.

"Crush the Roh Tae-Woo regime" and "Yankee go home," students yelled.

Officials, who declined to be named, said more than 1,000 protesters were arrested and dozens of both sides suffered minor injuries. One police commander said up to 5,000 people took part in the protests.

The clashes came on the second anniversary of June 1987 rioting that led to the end of the authoritarian regime of former President Chun Doo-Hwan.

The government deployed 20,000 riot police to block protests. Thousands of troopers in combat fatigues and visored helmets guarded central Seoul and key government buildings. Some 20 busloads of riot police ringed the US embassy, but no trouble was reported there.

Protests began earlier today when riot police blocked demonstrations at two colleges by some 2,000 radical students demanding permission to attend a youth festival next month in communist North Korea. Some 1,500 students battled riot police with clubs and rocks at Yonsei University when troopers stopped them from marching away. Some 500 protesters at nearby Sogang University fought police with firebombs and rocks.

Thousands of students then gathered in the city centre, where more fighting broke out as prote-sters called for Roh's fail. The clashes were the worst in Seoul since labour and student protests late April.

Kim Dae-Jung, head of the opposition party for peace and democracy, said Roh had to hold a referendum or the opposition would be forced to unleash an anti-government campaign. "We cannot but fight ... if Roh intends to avoid the interim appraisal," Kim said.

Express train hits bus

MOSCOW, June 10, (Reuter): Thirty-one people were killed in the second Soviet rail accident within a week when an express train hit a bus stalled on a level-crossing, Tass said today.

The crash involving a trainload of holidaymakers from Black Sea resorts in southern Russia came less than a week after a gas pipeline exploded near the trans-Siberian railway, killing an estimated 400 peo-

As news of the latest accident emerged, Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov announced the government was setting up a powerful permanent commit-tee headed by one of his deputies to co-ordinate handling of major accidents and disasters. Tass news agency said yesterday's accident occurred on a stretch of the railway line between the resort of Adler and the city of Voronezh near where two trains crashed head-on in 1987, killing 106 people.

The Soviet Union's worst-ever rail disaster last Sunday involved trains travelling from and to Adler a haven for sun-seekers from all over the country during the summer.

Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev said that disaster aroused suspicion of "negligence and violations" in equipment handling.

Ryzhkov made his announcement to the Supreme Soviet, the upper chamber of the country's new Parliament, in a speech outlining plans for a major reorganisation of the vast government bureaucracy.

Creation of the committee followed bitter com-plaints, intensfied in the wake of last December's Armenian earthquake which killed some 25,000 people, that the Soviet Union was totally unprepared to deal with such disasters.

The state television report said some leaders of unauthorised student and workers' unions have already been taken into cus-tody or turned themselves in to

It added: "With the help of the public, police have already detained some of the organisers and inciters of the counterrevolutionary rioting.'

Among those detained was Guo Haifeng, a member of the five-man leadership of the "Autonomous Workers' Association." The report said he was arrested when about to set fire to an armoured personnel carrier.

A number of suspects had escaped from the city, the tele-vision added. It broadcast an appeal for them to surrender, Many of those held were accused of hooliganism, looting, rioting, arson, beating people and violating martial law

Report: Military may fight drug war

WASHINGTON, June 10, (Agencies): The administration of President George Bush is considering using the US military, possibly including commando units, against drug lords overseas as part of a broad campaign against narcotics trafficking, according to a report published

New guidelines to that effect, despite a 1976 presidential order barring the US government from assassinations, are contained in a draft National Security directive awaiting action at the White House, said the Miami Herald in a report distributed by the Knight-Ridder News Service.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he was not familiar with the story, but he added: "Assassinations are illegal. We don't do assassin-

A congressional aide said that the National Security Council staff was drafting a directive to broaden the war on drugs.

■ A grand jury has returned one of the largest cocaine and money laundering indictments in central Virginia, a result of undercover work by federal and state officials, US Attorney Henry Hudson said yesterday.

The 49-count indictment against 17 people was the product of a joint undercover investigation which included the FBI, the IRS, Virginia State Police and local authorities.

The indictment alleges that Jesse Lindsey Jr was the head of a major interstate cocaine distribution network. Authorities say he flew to New York every four to six weeks to purchase kilogrammes of cocaine. The indictment also alleges Lloyd Matthew Strauss Jr. would transport the cocaine into Virginia hidden in a spare tyre of Lindesey's car.

Filmmaker shares visions

He's only dreaming

HOTAKA, Japan, June 10, (AP): Akira Kurosawa has spent 46 years using his genius as a film director, editor and writer to create painfully realistic protrayals of human nature.

In "Dreams," his new film now in production, the acclaimed director plans to regreate his dreams to reach audiences living in a modern world.

""The feelings which he sleeping in our hearts, the
"seere hidden deep inside, and the dark wishes and fears... manifest themselves honestly in our dreams," says the 79-

"Dreams" is a series of nine episodes ranging cerics to a nightmare of nuclear holocaust.

Kurosawa's legendary insistence on perfection is evident amid the watery fields of green mustard which mirror snow-capped peaks he finally found in central Japan.

Large blue and green reflectors are shifted to and fro to capture the sunlight. Men in wetsuits splash through a stream swollen by melting snow, arranging water plants and snagging trash before it floats by. Other staffers scramble up and down banks, arranging the foliage.

Finally, the sun breaks out of the clouds. "Start," assistant director Takashi Koizumi

A brightly costumed funeral procession dances along the tree-lined path beside the stream. accompanied by musicians playing drums, flutes and cymbals.

"Cut" shouts Kurosawa. "One more time." Blue jean-clad Akira Terao, who plays Kurosawa in all but two of the dreams, stands patiently as scattered flower petals are collected and dancers return to position. A crane lifts a tree branch out of the way.

'We'll do the real shooting now," Kurosawa

As Terao, who has wandered into a strange village, watches the procession, an elderly man in a straw hat and orange apron, played by Chishu Ryu, explains that the villagers are celebrating. rather than mourning, the death of a 99-year-old woman who has led a fulfilling life.

"Something strange floated down the river. Do it again," Kurosawa shouts.

Kurosawa began his career in 1943 amid censorhip and economic limitations imposed by World War II. In his memoirs, he says he learned to thrive under restrictions from deadlines and budgets, which forced him to develop new

To film quickly and effectively, he began the innovative use of two or more cameras on every set - Here one is in a tree and a second is above a mustard field.

The actors rehearse repeatedly until Kurosawa feels they are camera-ready.

The director edits his films as they are shot and shows them to his staff only after the first cuts are made. Having mastered most of the skills of filmmaking, including scriptwriting and set design, he exercises almost total control, producer Yoshio

Long hours in the darkroom have made Kurosawa's eyes sensitive to light, obliging him to wear his trademark sunglasses and cap. Kurosawa walks slowly and his hands shake ever so slightly as he lights a cigarette, but he remains tall and hearty, clad in sneakers, faded jeans and a blue-striped shirt.

"Human hearts have been lost along with nature. I am nostalgic for a good environment and good hearts," he said while discussing "Dreams." "This is a beautiful spot, a very gorgeous river. But we had to look all over Japan to find a river like this. That's how much nature is lost," he says.

Materialism replaces activism

US a 'culture of greed'

PHILADELPHIA, June 10, (UPI): A "Culture of Greed" has replaced the political and social activism of the 1960s in the United States and is endangering the strides made by women and minorities during that era, another and feminist Betty Friedan said yesterday.

Friedan, speaking at a symposium of the 1960s entitled "Decade of Dissent", said the 'new traditionalism" that swept the country following the election of Ronald Reagan threatens to push women back into the home.

"The decisions being made today in the courts are countering these movements, Friedan said. "There is a genuine political attempt to put back women and minorities from those who benefit from the culture of

The founder of the National Organisation for Women was one of several renowned 1960s figures - including Timothy Leary and Woodstock producers Joel Rosenman and John Roberts — who participated in the daylong

In a panel discussion, Roberts took a more benevolent view of the world 20 years after Woodstock.

We have been about the business of rebuilding the society after the barriers have been torn down," Roberts said. "We don't have to be storming down the barricades all the time."

Friedan argued that there has been a complete reversal in the social programmes started in the 1960s. Panel member Zoharah Simmons, who helped organise the civil rights movement in Mississippi in 1963, agreed.

"We began changing in people's minds what it was that the government's role was about, changing the inequities in society," she said. "It was only a beginning, but much of this has been totally eroded in the Reagan era."

Some of the panelists blamed the lapse of idealism on a generation of young people brought up on the materialistic values fostered by the Reagan administration.

Leary, the former Harvard professor whose experiments with LSD have made him a legend, rejected the notion that the drug problems of the 1980s had their roots in the 1960s.

Mothers kill babies, doctor says

Some cot deaths actually murder

LONDON, June 10, (AP); As many as 10 per cent of babies thought to be "cot death" victims were probably murdered by their mothers, a pediatrician said in an article published vesterday.

Professor Roy Meadow, head of pediatrics and child health at St. James's University Hospital, Leeds, said between 2 per cent and 10 per cent of the deaths attributed to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome "have probably been smothered by their mothers.'

"Some mothers smother their child when they are feeling a violent hatred towards their baby, others do it in a repetitive systematic way, taking their child regularly to the doctor each time they have smothered their child for long enough to make him or her unconscious," Meadow said in an article published in the British Medical Journal.

Dr Pamela Davies, of the Foundation for the study of Infant Deaths, said the organisation had always recognised that some cot deaths might have been caused by adults, but she thought a figure of 10 per cent was highly unlikely.`

Meadows said many "cot death" victims had suffered recurrent episodes of respiratory arrest or seizures that may have been investigated but doctors may not have considered the possibility of child abuse.

"Asphyxia is an uncommon but serious form of child abuse," Meadows wrote.

"The commonest form is smothering and the abuser is usually the child's mother, who uses her hand, a pad of rolled-up clothing, or a pillow to obstruct the chid's air passages.

"Less commonly she presses the child's face against her chest, encloses the child's head in a plastic bag, or strangles by pressure on the

He added: "A young child who cannot breathe struggles and tries to get air. The smothering needs considerable force, even when a child is young. Despite the obvious violence entrailed the signs may be very few."

Independent research group says cold fusion breakthrough is real

SALT LAKE CITY, June 10, (UPI): A claimed cold fusion breakthrough at the University of Utah is proving to be a reality and apparently can produce useable electrical energy within a few years, an independent research organisation said yesterday.
"Solid-state fusion in palladium is real," said Hal

Fox, president of the Fusion Information Centre Inc. in the University of Utah Research Park but not affiliated with the school. Electrochemists Stanley Pons, chairman of the University's Chemistry Department, and Martin

Fleischmann, from England's Southampton University, announced their fusion-in-a-flask discovery March 23

Many researchers, primarily physicists, have challenged the process. But Fox said his group's studies of investigations by other scientists indicate "The Fleischmann-Pons effect involves fusion reactions, the effect can be replicated, the fusion reactions can be controlled and the process has strong commercial applications." The Utah device consists of a laboratory flask filled with heavy water and containing a palladium electrode wrapped with platinum wire, which serves as a second electrode.

An electrical charge splits the heavy water into its two elements - oxygen and deuterium, a form of hydroven with an extra neutron. Pons and Fleischmann said the palladium electrode then absorbs the deuterium in such concentrations the atoms fuse into helium, releasing more heat energy than the electrical energy needed to start the reaction. If the claimed fusion reaction can be scaled up to commercial generating plants, it could provide cheap, relatively safe and virtually inexhaustible energy supplies.

Following a May 23-25 fusion workshop conducted by the Los Alamos National Laboratory and the Energy Department, Fox said Fusion Information Centre Scientists and engineers studied more than 100 papers on the research. "In addition, the centre has had personal communication with several scientists working on cold fusion outside the University of Utah," he said.

CD4 like a 'magic bullet' to kill AIDS

MONTREAL, June 10, (AP) The experimental drug CD4 is the nearest thing to a "magic bullet" that might one day be used to treat AIDS, says one of the discoverers of the virus that causes the deadly disease.

"If CD4 doesn't work in the early phases, don't despair," Dr Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute said yesterday at the close of the Fifth International Conference on AIDS. Gallo said CD4 blocks the mechanism used by the AIDS virus to attach itself to certain white blood cells and infect them. This mechanism is so critical to AIDS virus growth in the body that some version of CD4 ought to be able to interfere with it, he He also reported that mice given a single AIDS virus gene developed an AIDS-related cancer called kaposi's sarcoma, suggesting the cancer is caused by the virus itself. Gallo's studies on kaposi's sarcoma offer one possible explanation for the origin of the disease in AIDS patients. Others have evidence indicating kaposi's sarcoma may be caused by another virus, not the AIDS virus, but Gallo's work questions that theory.

His report dealt with a study involving kaposi's sarcoma developed in mice that were genetically engineered to contain an AIDS virus gene called TAT. The TAT gene is a kind of super charger that speeds up the replication of the AIDS virus. Mice carrying the TAT gene developed kaposi's sarcoma, but the cancer did not arise in the cells carrying the gene, according to the study, but arose from other

Gallo said that finding suggests the gene triggers the production of some biochemical factor that in turn causes the can-

He also said certain kaposi's sarcoma cells called spindle cells are releasing "a whole series of biological molecules that allow us to create KS (kaposi's sarcoma) in a mouse." If the work proves correct, it offers the possibility that drugs could be designed to interfere with these molecules and treat or prevent kaposi's sarcoma, Gallo The AIDS virus infects certain or CD4 cells. These are master players in the immune system.

For example, a leukemia-causing virus called HTLV-1 can infect the same cells infected with HIV and can "turn on" HIV in the cells, resulting in the production of more of the virus, he said.

Human herpes virus type 6, or HHV-6, which was discovered recently by Gallo and his colleagues, also can infect the same cells and turn on HIV, he said.

Vicious cycle

He described what he said was a possible vicious cycle in which HHV-6 and HIV work together to cause disease.

"All of us in this room almost have HHV-6," he said. Healthy people control it — it causes no illness. But HIV weakens the immune system, allowing HHV-6 to grow.

The proliferating HHV-6 then triggers the production of HIV, in Gallo's scenario. The HIV further weakens the immune system, allowing further growth of HHV-6 — and so on.

AIDS, or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, is a fatal, incurable disease spread primarily through sexual intercourse and sharing of contaminated syringes by drug abusers.

US troops size cut in Europe could save $8 billion

WASHINGTON, June 10, (UPI): President Bush's conventional arms plan to cut troop strength in Europe could conserve $8 billion over time, but the big-ticket savings won't occur until 1993, the congressional budget office

The assessment yesterday, in a staff working paper prepared for the Senate Budget Committee, found that the big savings involve military hardware

Absent other policy changes, the report estimated, reducing the size of US forces in Europe by 30,000 people - to 275,000 troops - would cut personnel and operating costs by about $2 billion a year.

Over the long term, the reduced need to buy new weaponry could avoid the necessity of buying about $6 billion in new defence hardware, although the budget agency estimated those savings would be spread over many years and, at most, avoid the spending of several hundred million dollars in any one

Bush made the proposal during last week's NATO summit in Brussels, Belgium. The plan calls for a ceiling on US and Soviet ground and air forces from the Atlantic to the Urals of about 275,000 troops each. That move would require a 30,000 US troop reduction and a cut of 325,000 Soviet troops.

Bush also has proposed equal levels of tanks, artillery and armoured personnel carriers, and cuts in combat aircraft and helicopters to levels 15 per cent below current NATO strength. The proposal would require significantly larger reductions by Moscow than by the United States and the NATO allies. Bush hopes a treaty could be agreed on quickly, with reductions made by 1992 or 1993. The budget office said under that schedule, the $2 billion in personnel and operating savings would not begin until 1991 at the earliest and full savings probably would not be realized until at least 1993.

The budget office reached its cost estimates by assuming that two-thirds of a mechanized division — roughly 26,000 combat and support personnel — would be removed, along with 96 F16 fighters and their 4,000 combat and support personnel.

The report said one possibility for a one-time savings would be to bring home the 401st tactical fighter wing, now in Spain but due to move to Italy. If the unit were withdrawn, between $400 million and $500 million could be saved.

Bush has proposed that weapons withdrawn from Europe be destroyed, but senior US military officials have told Congress the best course would be to shift the most modern of the withdr-. awn weapons to reserve and guard units in the US then, older guard and reserve weapons would be destroyed.

The CBO report said procurement savings might be delayed if the United States decided to withdraw older weapons from Europe, such as the M-60 tank and A-10 attack plane, which are no longer in production.

■ The White House said on Friday that President Bush has made no final decisions on negotiating strategies for talks on long-range nuclear missiles talks that resume in Geneva on June 19.

■ The Air Force on Friday narrowed its search for 40 radio tower sites needed to complete a "doomsday" radio network, announcing construction was envisioned in the east from Maine to Georgia and westward from Virginia to California.

In all, 26 states will probably have one or more of the final 40 towers, the Air Force said.

Gangs rampage through Fergana

Ethnic unrest spreading

MOSCOW, June 10, (Agencies): Gangs armed with automatic weapons, iron bars and petrol bombs rampaged through the Fergana region of Soviet Uzbekistan and ethnic violence threatened to spread to neighbouring areas, Soviet media said today.

A military commander said gangs were "conquering" new districts in the region, around 200 km (125 miles) southeast of the Uzbek capital Tashkent, and there were fears the unrest could spill over the border to the neighbouring republic of Tajikistan.

At least 80 people have been officially reported dead and more than 800 injured after a week of some of the worst rioting in decades. The unrest began last weekend when Uzbeks attacked the local Meskhetian minority.

The violence in the Central Asian republic appears to have broadened into widespread rioting and a Stroyed, oursed down. You can narray can it a nouse anymore. She said she last saw her father trying to escape a mob.

The killing started June 3 in a rampage between ethnic Uzbeks and the Meskhi Turk minority, who were forcibly resettled in the Fergana valley of Uzbekistan by Josef Stalin in 1944.

Rioters have set fire to more than 550 houses, Soviet media reported.

Rioters have set fire to more than 550 houses, Soviet media reported. The reports said 300 people have been detained.

State-run Soviet media and residents of Central Asia have said the ethnic strife in Uzbekistan was sparked or aggravated by the region's economic woes. Ryzhkov said the plan would cut the 50 government ministries to just 32. It would remove their authority over basic elements of the economy, ranging from construction to agriculture, and restrict their duties to long-range planning and scientific and technological help in the spheres they oversee.

The Council of Ministers, the cabinet that Ryzhkov heads, would be cut from 100 to just 10 members under the plan, he said. Two special government commissions also will be formed, one to handle emergencies such as natural and man-made disasters and another to map economic reforms, he said.

But another newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda reported that officials warned a crowd of about 2,000 people was massing on the outskirts of Kokand and might attempt to try again to enter the town.

The unrest broke out at a time when the Kremlin was already facing continuing ethnic unrest in the disputed region of Nagorno-Karabakh and grow-ing nationalist feeling elsewhere.

Telephone links between Moscow and major cities in the Fergana region, which is home to 1.8 million people, were down today and the area was closed to foreign correspondents.
At least 11,000 Meskhetians,

SANTIAGO, June 10, (AP): Unidentified gummen in a stolen car yesterday killed Roberto Fuentes Morrison, a notorious retired member of the military government's security services, police reported.

Police sources said Fuentes' body was hit by 13 bullets as four or five attackers sprayed him with sub-machine-gun fire. He was slain as he left his home in a middle-class neighbourhood of Santiago, some 40 blocks southeast of the city

The attackers fled, and no one has claimed responsibility for the attack. The attackers tied, and no one has calmed responsibility for the attack.

Fuentes, in his mid-50s, was a leading member of the so-called Joint Command. The group was an operative unit of the secret police, accused by home rights groups of serious violations against leftist dissidents after a 1973 coup

NEW DELHI: If you have ever thought of advertising for a husband or a wife, you must consult the Indian matrimonial columns, where experienced hands have been finding mates for as long as anyone

The bare essentials are easy enough to master. Include your profession, height is important, education a must, earnings are very clearly stated, and of course "community," that catchall category which covers caste, race, religion, region, and anything else you want it to mean. Girls are usually described as fair, meaning light-skinned; "wheatish" is also popular, and homely means accomplished in the

But today many young people are turned off by this perennial search device whereby parents place ads for their children. They say the only ones who are advertised are the losers whose parents have tried everything else — marriage brokers, family connections, the local astrologer, work mates, and anyone else they can find. Their new approach is to advertise directly in slick magazines aimed at a vounger crowd.

This qualifies as a daring and exciting development in Indian-arranged marriages, and recently I responded to one such ad. It was placed by Anita K., described as a 40-year-old divorcee. I wrote:

Dear Miss K., You will no doubt be surprised to have this belated reply to your matrimonial proposal of some time ago, but the truth is a friend brought it to my attention just yesterday. I am an active 61-year-old divorced professor from the United States working in India temporarily and looking for someone special. I would like to meet you sometime soon in Delhi in order to become better acquainted. Besh Wishes, Joseph. In about a week, I received this reply.

Dear Mr Joseph, Thanks for your letter dated 1 March in response to my matrimonial ad. I was glad to read the particulars given by you and am attracted toward you. I am looking for someone who is mature, understanding, and maybe you are the right man. Incidentally, I have obtained the US visa, and as my plans go I ought to be leaving for America by the end of March 1989. Your plan to visit Delhi at that time would not be of much help if we want to pursue this matter. Although I have one alternative to suggest.

Do you think you can make it to Delhi earlier than that? If yes, that would be lovely, and if not I could visit your place and meet you and we can talk things over. If we happen to check with each other,

then I could postpone my departure for America. But now let me give you some information about myself. I have divorced my husband, have one son who is 17 years old and is living with his father who is an army officer. I have no contact with my son since eight years. I am single and lonely. I would like to settle with someone who is considerate, affectionate, and broadminded enough to help me to live my life and not rule my life. I am very straightforward. I hate hypocrisy and unfaithfulness. I have had a very bitter experience with my first marriage. In my ad I had given a false name to hide my identity for obvious reasons. My name is Punit, and my height is 5 ft. 7 in. and not 170 cms which was wrongly printed. I have wheatish com-plexion. I am attractive, smart, and have a cheerful disposition. One of my hobbies is to laugh. Do I sound crazy? I am enclosing a photo, you may kindly send me yours.

Much Love, Punit. The photo was a knockout postcard-size picture of what looked like a movie queen in her early 20s. What to do next? I decided to consult my neighbour who originally showed me the ad. He has been anxiously searching for a spouse for several years but has not yet found the right girl.

"Shambhu," I asked, "what should I do about

"She looks like the right girl for you. She doesn' care about your caste, nationality, or religion, and she seems very smart. I would visit her if I were you, or invite her to come here. Talk to her on the telephone just to hear her voice. I find that's a wonderful way to get to know someone."

I was surprised at how fast things seemed to be moving. I had a much slower time frame in mind, but was quickly altering my perspective. "If I invite her to come here," I asked with some hesitancy, "where would she stay, etc.?" The answers were all well-established protocols worked out over cons of experience "She will take care of the overnight travel and you pay for the hotel and meals. No, she will not share a room with you. You will get her a room in a nice

"But Shambhu, do things always move this

He explained his latest effort at wife-hunting. "I just returned from Calcutta where I went to see this girl who happens to be from my same biradri (subcaste). I met her family and she is very nice, although she is not very pretty. Not ugly, mind you, but not very pretty. She speaks well, knows English, and I was pleased."

"So you went all the way there, and what happened?

"We met, we talked, and she said she was ready to make a firm commitment, but I didn't go that far. I have two other girls in Bombay and Bangalore to see first. The one in Bombay is very clever but always talking about her karma and astrology. The one in Bangalore, my brother met and he says she is OK. but physically we are a misfit. I am small and slim. She is a tall, heavy-built Punjabi girl. But he said I should meet her and make my own decision."

"So you want to check out these other girls before you give Calcutta a definite answer."

Political observers expressed surprise over the IDA-ANP linkup in the light of the contrasting stands of the two sides. ANP has a pro-Soviet policy, a pro-Najibuliah outlook and an anti-mujahedeen stance. It is also anti-American and secular.

The LJI is against Najibullah and is pro-mujahedeen, pro-American and Islam-based.

Recently ANP Chief Wali Khan wrote letters to world leaders, including Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, asking them to intervene in Afghanistan because the Pakistan government was interfering in the Afghan war. The entire IDA leadership rose up against him and accused him of high treason.

One of the reasons for ANP to make an exit from the PPP-led coalition was PPP's failure to coalition was PPP's failure to appoint the nominee of ANP as provincial governor. But PPP was more or less helpless in the matter since the governor is appointed by the president. The president was reported to be against appointing an ANP nominee in a province which is strategically placed and has a large nonslation of Afghan has a large population of Afghan refogees, well over two million. Being anti-mujahedeen in character, the ANP would have asked its governor to pursue anti-mujahedeen policies which would have meant a reversal of Pakistan's official policy on Afghanis-

According to observers the second possible reason for ANP's withdrawal from the PPP coalition was the current tour of the United States by Benazir and "her anti-Soviet anti-Najib and promujahedeen utterances in the United States."

However, press reports indicate that the PPP government will withstand the no-confidence move because it has the support of at least 50 members in the 80-member house. The ANP-IDA affiance has so far kept the strength of its porters secret.

In two of the four provinces (Punjab and Baluchistan) there are non-PPP governments. PPP has absolute majority in Sind and there is PPP-led coalition in

Slack supervision creates delinquents

Curfew in residential areas supported

VANDALISM in Kuwait is attributed to juvenile delinquents and is a major cause of concern to authorities, according to officials at the Ministry of Interior.

A local daily interviewed a number of residents to elicit opinions on the subject. The general consensus is that lack of security strictly imposed provides miscreants easy access to carry out their nefarious activities.

Fandi Al Mutairi said that the fact that youths openly challenge security authorities is evidenced in the deteriorating law and order situation. Residents have come to believe that they lack protection. He added: "Patrols are hardly seen particularly at Firdous and other remote areas." Security patrols should be increased especially in the later hours.

Vandalism committed by youth is generally attributed to lack of parental supervision. Additionally, authorities have been called upon to undertake co-operative efforts with parents and academic institutions to provide youth with opportunities to constructively make use of leisure hours.

The government is well aware of the immensity of the problem accidents took place in the month of April in Kuwait, accor-ding to a statistical release issued by the Traffic Department. The department said that the accidents resulted in the death of 30 persons and injury to 190 others, 109 of them seriously.

The number of accidents increased by 10 per cent, which represents an increase of 161 accidents compared to the month of March this year. Serious injuries were up by 51 per cent. 1,609 of the accidents were collisions, 125 knockovers and

Head of Technical Inspections at the Traffic Department, Fadagh Al Fadagh told KUNA that the main cause of the traffic accidents here is overspeeding. He added that drivers go at high speed and in case of emergency, they cannot control their cars, thus leading to serious traffic accidents. He accused drivers of being mainly responsible for traffic accidents in Kuwait.

Reasons Fadagh however attributed some of the accidents to technical faults like sudden breakdown in the brake system, flat tyres at high speeds or using spare parts not up to the required specifications. He also accused drivers of neglecting the periodical main-tenance of their cars, thus resulting in sudden failures and

He said that the most severe accidents take place in the twoway streets and accidents that force the drivers, because of high speed, to cross to the other direction of the road thus surprising.

'Ocean of emotion' at Soviet Congress

By Michael Putzel

THE first meeting of the Congress of People's Deputies convened to elect a president and choose a standing legislature. But it quickly became an outlet for national catharsis as representatives of the Soviet people poured out anger and grievances pent up for generations.

Under President Mikhail Gorbachev's tolerant hand, the congress has been purging Soviet society of its devils, re-examining history from the rostrum and demanding answers no one dared ask before in public. Just a year ago, at the Communist Party conference, long-time observers were left slack-jawed by the candid criticism from littleknown delegates and frank arguments between senior party officials, some of which were even shown on television. But from the opening moments of this congress, much of which has been broadcast live to a rapt nation, the horizons stretched again. This debate has been both broader and more pointed than anything seen in a public forum in this country in living memory.

"Each one of us wants to talk out an ocean of emotion," deputy Konstantin D. Lubenchenko said.

The result has been a tidal wave of words. Day after day for nearly two weeks, the people's representatives - most of them chosen in competitive elections - have talked openly, sometimes heatedly, sometimes even shouting, and their voices are heard throughout the

Some of the criticism has been by deputies playing to their constituents -- complaints about the miserable roads in Siberia, the disappearance of refrigerators, the poor health care. One noted a government claim that agricultural production had improved and suggested the increase must have gone to a restaurant in the agency that gathered the statistics because it certainly didn't reach stores in his

On occasion, the talk has even been personal. Gorbachev himself, who remains largely off-limits to the increasing frank official press, was compared by one deputy to Napoleon, "who, fearing neither bullets nor death, led the nation to victory but who, owing to sycophants and his wife, transformed the republic into an

"You can put me to death, but I fear this path," said Leonid Sukhov, a driver from Kharkov, who promised the President his vote but warned: "You, too, are incapable of avoiding the adulation and influence of your wife.

"Never before in history," he said, "have the rich and the poor sat at the same table, the former eating chicken, the latter licking their own fingers. What kind of perestroika is this?"

Deputies also have challenged the historical tenets on which the union of the 15 Soviet Socialist Republics is based and have demanded the Communist Party surrender its legal monopoly on power. Until now, even under Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, the sanctity of the union and one-party rule were not open to question.

"Up to now, in our history books, we have said Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania voluntarily joined the Soviet Union and that it was a popular revolution, there was no violence, and it was a declaration of free will," said historian Roy Medvedev. "This is a lie."

Lithuanian prosecutor Egidius V. Bichkauskas charged that the three independent Baltic states actually were handed to the Soviets on a platter as Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov and his German counterpart, Joachim von Ribbentrop, secretly carved up the lands that lay between them in 1939.

"As a result of this pact, sovereign Lithuania and the other Baltic republics were occupied and incorporated into the Soviet Union, losing their independent statehood," Bichkauskas said.

Soviets have been taught that the three republics overthrew their fascist rulers in popular uprisings in 1940, were then occupied by the Nazis and liberated by the Red Army at the end of the war. Gorbachev said he could hardly believe the revisionists' account, but he agreed to a congressional investigation to determine the truth.

Iran's leaders face delicate balancing act

Rival factions jostling for influence

By John Fullerton

IRAN'S fundamentalist rulers have to play a delicate balancing act to contain rival factions jos-tling for influence following the death of Ayatollah Khomeini, diplomats say.

Islamic rule imposed by Khomeini is well entrenched in Iran but a challenge by radicals is the most unpredictable element in assessing the country's

"In 10 years the regime has put down roots and I don't think it will change in the near future," said a Muslim diplomat based in Tehran.

The immediate priority for Iran's rulers would be to maintain an equilibrium among factions trying to fill the vacuum left by the death last Saturday of the supreme spiritual and political ruler.

Balancing the pillars of the incumbent establishment was a traditional power play going back cen-turies, diplomats said. It was also the hallmark of Khomeini's style in building a nation of 50 million into the world's most militant yet enigmatic Islamic Foreign analysts saw no immediate prospect of a radical shift in external policy. They said Iran was likely to continue its "no war, no peace" posture towards Iraq and maintain an estimated 2,000 activists and fighters in Lebanon.

But most diplomats interviewed by Reuters cautioned against predicting the future course of Iran's theocracy. They said changes were often rapid and could involve scattered violence in the months

"People talk a great deal more openly here than in many other countries in the area," said a European diplomat. "But it would be unwise to seek a simple prognosis now."

The main factions or sources of power identified by foreign analysts within the establishment were the clergy, the bazaar or community of shopkeepers and businessmen, the armed forces and finally the radical Revolutionary Guards.

One diplomat from a neighbouring country said he believed Khomeini's successor, President Ali Khamenei, would steer a pragmatic and cautious path. He would cultivate a working relationship with the man many foreigners and Iranians believe poised to wield real power, parliamentary Speaker Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani.

"Khamenei is his own man and has his own particular style," said one Western diplomat. "His power base is the bazaar and he's likely to favour a Political analysts said several of the preoccupations that had been intensively debated since the 1979 revolution had yet to be resolved.

They included land ownership, state intervention in the economy and mercurial relations with the West, as well as social issues from Islamic education to what is deemed appropriate public behaviour for Unfinished business included constitutional change which the diplomats said was expected to be the first hurdle tackled once the 40-day mourning period for Khomeini was over. The ink was still not dry on the draft proposals but if they were passed as planned, diplomats said, Khamenei could well find himself sidetracked into political obscurity.

to reinforce their role as radical guardians of the revolution now the eight-year war with Iraq was

The diplomat said the guards were likely to quickly focus on Khomeini's son and chief aide Ahmad as their natural mentor.

The game of checks and balances was likely to consume the energies of the Iranian leaderhip at least for the foreseeable future and in the absence of any credible external threat. (Reuter - Tehran)

Moderate support lukewarm

Hezbollah anxious

By Samla Nakhoul

THE influence of pro-Iranian militants in Lebanon is likely to be undermined if moderates win the leadership struggle now believe to be taking place in Tehran, political analysts said on

They said victory for Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani in Iran's presidential elections in August could seriously weaken the Iranian-backed Hizbollah (Party of God).

Ayatoliah Khomeini's death has left the Shi'ite Muslim extremists, thought to hold many of the 17 Westerners kidnapped in Lebanon, anxious about their future, they said. "If Rafsanjani wins the presidential elections, Hizbollah's future will threatened," said one Shi'ite analyst in Beirut. "It will not enjoy the privileged treatment it had."

Rafsanjani, now the parlia-mentary speaker, is widely regarded in the West as a relative moderate keen on improving iran's external relations.

"Naturally if the moderates come to power they will help secure the release of the hostages (held in Lebanon) in the coming period," an Iranian official in Beirut said.

Rafsanjani offered on Thursday if Washington assisted in tracing three Iranians whom Tehran believes are held by Christian gunmen in Lebanon. The Iranians and their Lebanese driver went missing in 1982 at a Christian militia checkpoint north of Beirut. The hardline Lebanese forces militia has denied kidnapping them and security sources in Beirut say the offer was clearly intended as a moderate overture. A Shi'ite politician said Iran under Rafsanjai was likely to channel its resources into reconstruction after the war with Iraq rather than into exploiting the Islamic revolution which inspired Hizbollah.

"The revolutionary era has gone with Khomeini's death," he said. "Iran will embark on a new state building phase."
He added that he expected

Iranian financial aid to Hizbollah to dwindle if moderates took over in Tehran. Iran, which under Khomeini chose Lebanon as the main target for Islamic revolution, now gives Hizbollah an estimated five million dollars a month.

It finances hospitals, schools and social offices for Shi'ites, traditionally the largest, poorest and least politically powerful community in Lebanon's sec-

Show of strength unlikely to solve crisis

Deng and Co forge fragile unity

By Guy Dinmore

CHINA'S embattled leadership put on a display of hardline unity with senior leader Deng Xiaoping back at the helm on Friday but foreign diplomats doubted the show of strength was a long-term solution to China's crisis.

Deng, 84, appeared on state television to confound rumours he was dead or close to death and praised troops for putting down what he called a "counter-revolutionary rebellion".

Deng was flanked by Premier Li Peng and President Yang Shangkun, both outspoken advocates of using troops to end the biggest anti-government protests since the 1949 revolu-tion which brought the current generation of leaders to power.

Diplomats, basing their estimates on many eyewitness accounts, believe the military slaughtered thousands when they moved in early on Sunday to end the pro-democracy occupation of Tiananmen Square. The authorities say fewer than 300

Notably absent from the line-up of leaders and generals was Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, a golfplaying reformist who has clearly been ousted. "The average age of these people is 80 or so — leaving out premier Li Peng. If Deng is still the central authority, what will happen when he dies? Will the ghost of Deng sit at the head of the table," commented an Asian diplomat. "They are reverting back to the 50s," he said, referring to arrests of students and workers and official warnings that troops were ready to put down protests in other parts of China.

Deng looked distinctly unwell and shaky on television, his voice slurred and at times incomprehensible. His tough-sounding speech was read out in part by a television commentator.

"There is obviously a succession crisis," the Western diplomat said.

"The same people have been struggling for power since Yanan," he added, referring to the late 1930s and 1940s when Mao's Red Army was holed up in northern China fighting Japanese invaders and forming the factions which would later struggle

Diplomats said Deng had cobbled together a fragile unity in the face of threats on the party's very existence but this could fall apart

Before the student unrest began eight weeks ago, Deng had been widely expected to step down later this year from his last remaining posts as chairman of the party and state central military commissions.

His historic summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev was to have capped a long career in which he twice survived political exile.

"The awful irony is that he wished to retire after the summit. Now he can't," the Western diplomat said.

Almost all the leaders lined up for a rare group photograph were wearing Mao-suits — seen by diplomats as a sign of a tougher times to come.

Even though students and workers have been suppressed in Beijing there are still large-scale demonstrations outside the have changed," he added. A Western diplomat commented: "They're trying to say here we are still in charge ... you can have your open-door policy but not open-mouths." Deng said the party's policies were correct though mistakes had to be rectified - apparently a reference to Zhao. "I see China going straight back to the 1950s with the repression after the "100 flowers" campaign ... history is repeating itself because basically the same people are still running China now as then," the Western diplomat added. Chairman Mao Tse-tung 100 flowers bloom."

He also defended the US decision to harbour China's most famous dissident, astrophysicist Fang Lizhi, in the US embassy in Beijing, saying, "it's awfully hard when a man presents himself, a person who is a dissident, and says his life is threatened, to turn him back.

'That isn't one of the premises on which the United States was founded," Bush added. Fang is now receiving the US hospitality he was unable to claim last February when he was invited to be a guest of the

On the final night of a three-day visit to China, Bush hosted a barbecue for Chinese leaders in a Beijing hotel. But Fang, who has spoken out repeatedly against human-rights abuses in China, was barred from attending by Chinese police. Bush's protests did not come until the next day, amid some

Colonial legacy haunts Britain

By Maureen Johnson

WITH the bloody crackdown in China, the legacy of empire has returned to haunt the British government.

Since the Chinese Army invaded Tiananmen Square. Britain's agreement to hand over Hong Kong to China in 1997 looks to many like a giant betraval.

Calls are mounting for Britain to open its doors to Hong Kong's 3.2 million Chinese who hold British passports, and to renegotiate or even scrap the handover agreement Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher signed in

But liberalising immigration is a vote-loser, and negotiating the agreement appears diplomatically impossible. agreement

Thatcher has reaffirmed the agreement, and all she has promised the fearful Hong Kong residents is greater "flexibility" in the immigration rules. These allow discretion over letting in senior public servants and people with private incomes. Hong Kong Governor Sir David Wilson raised the issue during 90 minutes of emergency talks on Friday with Thatcher.

"I said that if it was possible to give a right of entry to Britain for the people in Hong Kong who have British passports, it would do an immense amount of good in Hong Kong," Wilson told reporters outside Thatcher's 10 Downing Street residence.

He said Thatcher replied "that would be a matter of grave political difficulty," while reiterating promises to be more flexible.

For the most part, the shutters that Britain brought down in 1962 to block immigration from the former empire will remain in

Nearly 30 years after Britain dismantled most of its globe-girdling empire, the crisis has reopened old wounds and raised painful questions of duty and Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe has resorted to expressions of hope that China's ageing, hardline communists who shocked the world last weekend will have gone by 1997; that China's economy will always need Hong Kong's capitalism; that Britain has no option but to hand over the colony. Declared the spectator, an influential weekly usually sym- 4; pathetic to Thatcher: "If 3.25 tory, we have forced Britons to be slaves," it added in an editorial. The China crisis has also highlighted longtime charges that the immigration rules are aimed mainly at keeping out blacks and Balking at easing the law for Hong Kong. Howe warned the House of Commons against "a massive new immigration commitment which could more than double the ethnic minority population of the United King-in Sudan, where sharia has been largely dormant since 1985.

Official and diplomatic sources in Khartoum said Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak had told a Sudanese delegation in Cairo that Egypt was ready to accept the loss of the defence pact if Sudan believed it would help the peace process in the south.

Mubarak said last month that the defence pact was in Sudan's interest and that there was no scope for discussion over it.

The SPLA maintains that Mahdi's government has not yet implemented all the conditions contained in the SPLA-DUP

The sources said that view was supported by a report by Sudanese legal experts submitted to the government last week.

Mahdi told Sudani that his government had no plans to issue an executive cabinet order to freeze hodoud.

Boy shot dead in Gaza

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM, June 10, (Agencies): Israel's defence minister today promised harsher measures to put down a Palestinian uprising as troops killed a boy and wounded 11 residents in the curfew-

The soldiers shot dead the Palestinian boy as he threw stones in Gaza's Jabalya refugee camp. They later. opened fire on mourners breaking a seven-day-old curfew to visit the boy's home.

In an interview on Army Radio, hawkish Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin said: "I believe the more we improve the means, the tools, find ways of more pointed and harsher punishments than those we had until now... (the more we can calm the uprising). "This is in the realm of punishing precise targets, whether it is an individual, the house of someone involved in something or administrative detention for a longer period of time."

Rabin had been asked if harsher measures could calm the 18month-old uprising against Israeli rule in the occupied territories.

He said Israel would expand prison space, currently for 8,500 detainees, to a capacity of more than 10,000. The Army destroyed the homes of two Hamas Islamic fundamentalist activists this week.

In a month-long military crackdown in the territories, Rabin has signalled that Palestinians will face a tougher iron fist if they reject an Israeli peace plan for elections in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to choose negotiators for talks with Israel.

PLO officials meeting a US delegation in Tunis have so far insisted elections must be preceded by Israeli withdrawal from the territories it occupied in the 1967 Middle East war. Israel rejects these conditions.
The US yesterday denied reports that the PLO had rejected the elections for Palestinians, which Washington currently sees East peace.

"Based on the discussions that we have had, they have not, in our opinion, rejected the election concept. Our view is that they will continue to explore the elec-tions concept," US State Depart-ment spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said in Washington.

Israel has come under severe international criticism for such administrative measures as expulsion, destroying homes and imprisonment of Palestinians without trial.

In Gaza, doctors at the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) said eight-year-old Shadi Ziad Awad was shot in the heart by a plasticcoated metal bullet when soldiers fired on a group of stone-throwing children.

An Army spokesman confirmed the death, but said the boy was 12-years-old. The Army was investigating the circumstances. Several dozen mourners visiting the body at Awad's Jabalya

"I ask the President and the American administration: what are Palestinian human rights under the occupation?"
He added: "Why is there in the minds of the Ameicans two weights and two measures when it is a question of rights of Palestinians under the occupation and in other regions of the world." The US said the resolution was unbalanced because it condemned Israel's crackdown in the territories while ignoring violence by Palestinians. The vote yesterday was 14-1, with only the US against. Britain, France and Canada voted for it.

Arafat reiterated that he was ready to form a Palestinian government in exile, half of which would be made up of Palestinians living in the territories, if that would contribute to advancing the peace process in the Middle East.

now we have not received a clear response on this subject from the American administration," the PLO leader said.

The creation of a provisional Palestinian government is a decision of the Palestine National Council," the PLO's parliament in exile, Arafat said. "It will be formed at the opportune political moment."

Asked about Israeli Premier Yitzhak Shamir's plan to hold elections in the territories, Arafat noted that the PLO has accepted the principle of elections, but wants them to be held only after a withdrawal of Israeli forces and under the supervision of UN observers.

The underground called on the 1.7 million Palestinians in the occupied lands to stop paying taxes, tear up identity cards and stop co-operating with the military government, which issues licences. ID cards and other official documents.

Najib insists on a role in talks

Najibullah also said the apparent shift in US and Pakistani policy away from a military end and toward a political settlement could hasten an end to

However, he rejected as unacceptable one of the terms set in talks this week between US President George Bush and Pak-istan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto: that Najibullah's ouster be a condition of a negotiated settlement.

"How can a political solution be achieved without the lawful government of Afghanistan?" the president said in an interview on Thursday night with the official Bakhtar news agency.

"We believe it is not appropriate for the United States and Pakistan to dictate the acceptable models and prescriptions for a political solution to the people of Afghanistan," he

During their meetings in Washington, Bush and Benazir agreed to press for a political solution to the war in Alghanii tan but planned to continue arming the rebels and seeking an end to Najibullah's rule. The rebels refuse to negotiate with Najibullah, the former chief of the Afghan Secret Police. However, their campaign to top-ple his government by force has stalled since the withdrawal of the last Soviet soldiers on Feb 15.

Pakistani officials have said the rebels should be able to negotiate with the Kabul government once Naiib and other leading members of his People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan are removed from power. The party seized power in an April 1978 coup.

Bush and Benazir seemed to agree that a military solution to the conflict cannot be achieved and that the stalemate between the pro-Soviet government forces and the insurgents has compelled both Islamabad and Washington to consider other

Roman city uncovered in Israel

BEIT SHE'AN, Israel, June 10, (UPI): More than a century ago British travellers came upon a single Roman column standing half-buried in the middle of a swamp near a dusty Arab village.

The solitary pillar stood bet-ween the crumbling remains of an ancient Roman theatre and a looming mound built up by millennia of human settlement stretching back to Neolithic Little did the British travellers realise that beneath the swamp was the ruined Roman-Byzantine city of Scythopolis, frozen in time by a catastrophic 8th century earthquake.

Excavations by the Depart-ment of Antiquities and Hebrew University over the last three years have uncovered only a fraction of Scythopolis, but enough has been found to establish the Jordan valley site as the largest and best preserved Roman-Byzantine city in Israel.

Hoping to turn the important archaeological discoveries into a major attraction for visitors, Israel has designated the Beit She'an dig as one of the country's top four tourism projects and has earmarked $12 million for it over the next four years. Visitors to the site can see not only the impressive ruins, but an RENEGADE PC officer Lt Col Reynaldo Cabauatan this week offered the Aquino government his expertise in psychological warfare in the fight against insurgency but — acknowledged that he is still a staunch supporter of deposed President Marcos and would work for his return.

Cabauatan denied mutiny charges against him, saying that he had never participated in any destabilization attempt against the government.

Cabauatan, who was captured in a Roxas Blvd. restaurant last month, spoke to newsmen following the postponement of his scheduled arraignment before General Court-Martial No. 12, headed by Brig. Gen. Andrew Francisco at Camp Aguinaldo.

His lawyers had argued that the military court could not proceed with the arraignment because charges should have been filed first with the civil courts.

Francisco set a hearing on the issue for May 29.

Cabauatan admitted establishing the Nationalist Army of the Philippines (NAP) but he denied it was a Marcos loyalist or rightist armed group. "It is a nationalist group."

He said his aim was "to reform the whole nation in its socio-cultural aspects by introducing a pro-Filipino ideology."

Cabauatan said Marcos should be allowed to return and defend himself to show that the Filipino judicial system is strong and is not being dictated on by

Immunity power upheld

By R.G. Panaligan

THE Supreme Court (SC) ruled yesterday that the power of the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) to grant immunity covers not only criminal but also civil liability.

To strip the PCGG of its power to grant immunity from civil liability is to hamper its efforts in the recovery of ill-gotten wealth, the SC said in a decision written by Justice Hugo E. Gutierrez Jr. The ruling reversed the Sandiganbayan and upheld Solicitor General Francisco I. Chavez's stand on the grant of immunity by the PCGG. Reversed was the Sandiganbayan ruling which states that "the PCGG did not then and does not now have the power to grant civil immunity." Upheld was Chavez's assertion that "the nonobservance of the immunity provision granted by the PCGG will hinder the voluntary co-operation of known Marcos cronies to enter into amicable settlements or compromises with respect to the recovery of ill-gotten wealth." With the SC ruling, the Sandiganbayan was ordered to drop the name of Jose D. Campos Jr from the list of defendants in one of the 39 civil cases filed by the PCGG against former President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife Imelda, and about 300 so-called

Eleven SC justices concurred with the ruling. Two justices inhibited themselves while Justice Abraham

F. Sarmiento dissented. Sarmiento said that Campos Jr should not be dropped from the case by reason merely of the alleged immunity granted by the PCGG. He said the grant of immunity must be judically approved to assure that the government "does not get a raw deal" in any compromise it enters into with On May 28, 1986, the PCGG granted immunity to

Jose Y. Campos and members of his family in exchange for the surrender to the government of all interests they held in the name of the Marcoses. When Campos Jr sought the dismissal of the complaint filed against him before the Sandiganbayan, the anti-graft court denied his plea.

Also denied by the Sandiganbayan was the plea of Solicitor General Chavez, who represented the PCGG, to drop Campos Jr from the list of defen-

When the motions for reconsideration filed by both Campos Jr and Chavez were denied by the Sandiganbayan, a case was filed before the SC. Originally, only Chavez elevated the case to the High Tribunal, but it allowed the intervention of

The SC said the law empowers the PCGG to grant immunity in criminal prosecutions. And the PCGG is authorised to file both criminal and civil cases against persons suspected of having acquired ill-

It added "it is crystal clear from the law empowering the PCGG to grant criminal immunity must be interpreted to relate only to a criminal action and not to a civil action. In case of a civil action, the power to grant immunity or the making of the decision not to file a civil case or to drop one already in progress must be related to a provision in the PCGG Law which specifically lays down the procedures and the applicable laws in the prosecution of civil suits," the SC said.

The High Court also cited a well-settled doctrine that "amicable settlements or compromises are not only allowed but actually encouraged in civil cases."

LAOANG CITY: The city government has revived the old animal trading practice locally called dayo. Mayor Ernesto Tamayo said that the trading is being supervised by City Hall personnel. It is being held every Friday in the St. Joseph satellite public market.

During the first few weeks of the trading, Mayor Tamayo said, the farmers were able to sell their animals at good prices to buyers that came from neighbouring towns and provinces.

The dayo helps generate more income for the farmers and also helps the city collect more taxes, according to Councilor Celestino Al-mazan who had organised the cattle raisers into an associa-

IRIGA CITY: Mrs Minnie T. Arroyo, regional director of the Office of the Southern Cultural Communities (OSCC), announced that 25 carabaos will be distributed to tribal communities in Camarines Sur and Camarines Norte.

The carabaos will be given to the tribal farmers under the "draft animal dispersal" programme, one of the projects of the OSCC aimed at helping tribesmen in their farm activities.

Arroyo noted that the carabao is the farmer's "beast of burden" in land-preparation activities such as plowing and harrowing.

The OSCC conducted recently a seminar during which the beneficiaries were taught the proper care of the carabao. Raymund Marcelino and Francisco Antang of the Department of Agriculture gave pointers to the tribesmen on the breeding and care of the carabao. (Encarnita Martinez)

Loggers and conservationists battle

National park's future bleak

ST PAUL NATIONAL PARK, Philippines, (AP): The craggy face of St Paul mountain looms bleak and forbidding above denuded slopes, an image symbolic of the fight being waged between loggers and conservationists in this government reservation.

The mountain forms the backbone of the St Paul Subterranean National Park, site of an eightkilometre (4.8-mile) underground river which attracts hundreds of cave explorers and naturalists from all over the world to the frontier province of Palawan each year.

Monkeys frolic on treetops and squirrels dart behind trunks to the delight of hikers along rugged mountain trails. Beneath the mountain, the river winds along the deep, wide recesses of a cave with cathedral chambers where swallows and bats flit inces-

Since 1984, park officials have complained of vandalism, hunting and intrusion into the 5,753hectare (14,209-acre) park by guards of the neighbouring nation-wide Princesa Timber

Last year, environmentalists raised a more pressing issue: cutting all trees on the park's western boundary was threatening the underground river's survival.

In September, district fores-teps reported the timber company had cleared a 270-hectare (667-acre) area at the foot of the nearby Mt Bloomfield for a treeplanting project not yet approved by the government.

Ibarra Poliquit of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources described the denuded area as "critical to the life of Cabayugan River which flows into the underground river." He recommended the area be classified as a critical watershed or a wilderness area to prevent further logging.

Haribon contends settlers who practice "slash and burn" farming find their way to the mountains mainly via logging roads. The group has recommended that communities around the forests be allowed to manage the resources so residents can have a steady source of income and won't strip more areas.

Haribon is supported by environmental groups abroad like the Swiss-based International Union for the Conservation of Nature, which has considered the nomination of the St Paul Park as a world heritage site and its inclusion in the list of threatened parks.

Last August, the union's com-mission of national parks and protected areas complained to the government about construction of roads beside the park, which brought in illegal settlers along its boundary.

Under a debt-for-nature swap agreement, the first of its kind in Asia, Haribon administers a $2 million donation from the World Wildlife Fund for conservation projects which include protecting St Paul National Park.

Juico ignored warnings

Employees pointed out irregularities

By B. Pango and L. Romero

AGRARIAN Reform Secretary Philip Juico was warned twice about an irregular land transaction in Camarines Sur but he did not heed the warnings, DAR sources said this

The first warning was in the form of an anonymous letter which concerned DAR employes sent Juico informing him about a suspicious transaction at DAR involving a bank-fore-closed property in Camarines Sur.

Sources said the anonymous letter obviously referred to the 1,889-hectare Hacienda Alberto in Garchitorena which was being sold at a grossly overpriced amount of P62.2 million to the government by a private firm under the "voluntary offer to sell" scheme of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Programme (CARP). The next warning came from a ranking

DAR official who wrote Juico a memorandum advising him to look into the Gar-chitorena transaction. Both warnings were reportedly brushed aside by the DAR chief. Meanwhile, Ombudsman Conrado M. Vasquez yesterday cited several legal complications in the contract of sale between Sharp International Marketing and the government which would determine the liability of officials involved in the Gar-chitorena land sale. This developed as Vasquez ordered his four-man investigating team to interview the listed beneficiaries under the CARP of the Garchitorena estate. Vasquez said it is possible the list of farmer beneficiaries is fictious since the land in Gar-chitorena is not arable. After Juico was warned of the "fishy" land transaction, it was immediately exposed after a joint congressional committee on agrarian reform headed by Rep. Edcel Lagman (LDP. Albay) and Sen. Heherson Alvarez initiated an inquiry into the land deal.

The expose forced Juico, along with two of his undersecretaries and 18 other DAR officers and field personnel, to go on leave while the multi-million peso land scam is being investigated by a committee created by President Aquino.

The INQUIRER tried to get the side of Juico but an aide in his Quezon City residence said he was out.

Agrarian Reform Undersecretary and current Officer-in-Charge Benjamin Leong said yesterday he will meet with Land Bank of the Philippines President Deogracias Vistan to demand that LBP officials and field personnel involved in the valuation of the property be subjected to investigation and "I believe it was not an exclusive DAR activity because they (LBP) are also included." Leong told reporters.

Leong said the committees on compensation clearing and land valuation are represented both by DAR and LBP but it is only the DAR getting the blame for the scandal.

On the ombudsman's investigation, one legal issue which has to be resolved, Vasquez said, is whether or not the contract was consummated despite the refusal of Land Bank's Vistan to sign the document.

Vasquez said that when he examined a copy of the contract, he noticed that it was notarized despite the lack of Vistan's sig-

"His (Vistan's) name was apparently erased, as shown by the xerox copy which I got from DAR." Vasquez said.

The ombudsman added that a preliminary investigation will be conducted only after the investigating team has arrived and evaluated the evidence gathered.

Meanwhile, Ador Cerojano, a spokesman of Sharp, yesterday said the firm is willing to settle with the government even if the final price is reduced.

Cerojano said Sharp is willing to settle if only to recover the firm's investments.

Special polls on June 18

THE Commission on Elections (Comelec) set June 18 as the date for the holding of special elections in 180 barangays in the country where a failure of election was declared last March 28 due to insurgency. terrorism, clashes between rebels and government troops, and electoral

Comelec officials said the new date for the special polls in barangays where a failure of regular election was declared was set after taking into account the reports of city and municipal election registrars in those areas, stating that the election for barangay officials can be held

Commissioner Alfredo E. Abueg Jr., chairman of the Comelec first division, said the poll body had earlier set for April 30 the special election in barangays where the March 28 polls were postponed, but this was cancelled to give the commission time to check the list of barangays where elections failed as originally scheduled.

Abueg said Republic Act 6679 under which the March 28 barangays polls were held empowers the Comelec to hold the special days 30 days after the cessation of the cause for suspension or postponement and, in all cases, not later than 90 days from the date of the original election.

If the scheduled June 18 special polls will be postponed anew, Comelec officials will be in trouble since the 90-day period within which such political exercise is required to be held expires on June 26. Abueg said the 180 barangays where failure of election was declared are mostly found in Mindanao, particularly in Lanao del Sur and Lanao del Norte.

He said 97 barangays in Lanao del Sur failed to hold elections last March 28 due to terrorism, ballot box snatchings, intimidation, and

The Comelec has not decided whether to hold special polls in 16T barangays where no election was held last March 28 because there were

National day celebrations

IN time for the celebration of the 91st Anniversary of the National Day of the Philippines, a group of budding high-spirited talents, young and old alike from the various working sectors of the Filipino community here in Kuwait, under the able supervision of Tolits Matig-A, will hold a cultural presentation billed as 'Fiesta Filipiniana '89", on June 16, 1989 at the Jahra Ballroom of the Le Meridien Hotel at 6.30 in the evening. The much-awaited affair will showcase varied ethnic dances all over the country as well as folk songs that will lure one's imagination to the Philippines of today and yesteryears: Moreover, a mini-play written and directed by Joey Laurente and Rene Rebosa that will outline the Filipinos' stiff strug-gle from the claws of the foreign colonizers till the much-dreaded Marcos dynasty which was toppled down by the most popular people power uprising at EDSA on February, 1986, will also highlight the night's affair.

Truly, this is one spectacular event that no one should miss: Indeed, according to the Executive Director of the Filipino Cultural Club, Salvador B. Patungan, the sagacity and artistic merits of the entire cast, is immeasurably commendable.

Tickets available at the following outlets: Phil. Embassy, Phil. Gift Shop, Mabuhay Restaurant, Rainbow Restaurant (Fahaheel) and at the entrance of the Al-Jahra Ballroom.

Fake medicine priority in budget

MANY drugs now sold in some of the country's drugstores are misbranded and adulterated, the Department of Health's (DOH) Bureau of Food and Drugs (BFAD) disclosed. BFAD director Cecille Gonzalez revealed that most of the fake medicines are antibiotics.

Gonzalez named Dalacin C, Ampicin, Pentacillin and Pentrexyl capsules as allegedly tampered drugs.

Dalacin C is widely used by teeners in treating acne problems while the other mentioned drugs are used in preventing infections.

Three drugstores in Las Pinas, one each in Malate, Muntinlupa and Pandacan and two in Quezon City were found selling these tampered drugs according to a BFAD report. BFAD's began inspecting antibiotics in drugstores when drug manufacturers reported that their products were being tampered. Manufacturers assured the public that steps would be takento make their products tamper-proof to prevent imitation. To protect the consumers. Gonzalez ordered all BFAD inspectors to inspect outlets and distributors of the drugs. Owners of the drugstores and pharmacies were also requested to determine the legitimacy of their sources and agents and to submit samples of suspicious drug products. Meanwhile, four drug manufacturers were served suspension orders after they were found to have violated the BFAD sanitation and quality

Egypt discusses budget with reduced deficit

Government to cut spending

CAIRO, June 10, (Reuter): The Egyptian parliament opened debate today on a 1989-90 draft budget with a sharply reduced deficit to meet a key demand by the International Mon-etary Fund (IMF).

Finance Minister Mohammed Al Razaz. presenting the draft to the 458-member People's Assembly, pledged that the government would continue economic reforms to cut public spending.

The draft put the gross budget deficit at £4.9 billion ($1.9 billion), down from the record £7.2 billion ($2.8 billion) in the financial year ending June 30.

Egypt, burdened with foreign debts estimated at $50 billion is about to enter fresh talks with the IMF on a package of economic

The government hopes an IMF team due in Cairo this month will approve a letter of intent enabling it to go to the Paris Club of creditor nations to reschedule debt payments of $4 billion due between last July 1 and the end of 1989.

The budget documents, made available to Reuters, put domestic and foreign debt commitments for 1989-90 at £5.9 billion ($2.3 billion) at the official exchange rate of £2.57 to

Payments already rescheduled under a 1987 agreement with the IMF would be channelled to a special bank account to be used after different grace periods.

The draft estimated that government revenues would rise to £25.4 billion ($9.88 billion) from 21.5 billion ($8.36 billion) in Razaz said the budget deficit would be partly financed by domestic and foreign borr-owing. The net deficit was estimated at £660 million ($256 million). Despite the reduced deficit, the draft would increase government subsidies for the poor by 13.7 per cent to £2.06 billion ($800 million). The government has vowed not to bow to IMF pressures to scrap subsidies, fearing a repetition of food riots in 1977 when dozens of people were killed following price raises which were later rescinded.

The budget documents envisaged a balance of payments deficit of £1.8 billion ($700 million) against £2.6 billion (about $1 billion) in 1988-89.

Pakistan committed to economic reforms

NEW YORK, June 10, (Reuter): Prime Minister Benazir Blantto of Pakistan said yesterday her government was committed to market-oriented reforms and fiscal prudence.

Without naming the regime of Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq, whose death last year paved the way for ber election, Benazir sharply criticised the late military ruler's policies.

"The dictatorship had lived beyond its means, squandered the resources of a poor nation, leaving behind a legacy of debt and deficit," she said in a speech to the Asia Society, a non-profit educational group.

Citing a long list of woes, including high rates of infant mortality and mainuring. Benazir said: "This is the social price the people of Pakistan have paid for 11 years of military dictatorship." But Benazir, the Muslim world's only elected woman leader, said Pakistan was intent on economic reform. "Our govermment has embarked on the difficult but exhiberating path to a self-sostaining, market-oriented unregulated economy." Benazir drew a ripple of laugh-ter with an oblique reference to the fiscal troubles of the United States, remarking that "Pakistan is not the only nation in the world with a budget deficit."

During her first US visit since her election, Benazir this week met President George Bush, addressed a joint session of Con-gress and received an honorary degree from Harvard University from which she graduated in 1973. She is scheduled to return to commercial ties

RIYADH, June 10, (Reuter); Commerce ministers of the sixmember Gulf Co-operation Council (GCC) met in Riyadh today to discuss measures to strengthen trade ties.

Bahrain's Minister of Commerce and Agriculture, Habib Kassem, who chaired the one-day session, told reporters they took several steps to consolidate trade relations in the region. He said technical committees were formed to report on regulations to govern the establishment of commercial agencies and insurance companies by GCC nationals in member states.

A special team was set up to consider the prospects of entering into commercial negotiations with Islamic countries.

The meeting also welcomed suggestions to stage trade exhibitions by GCC members — Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. The first such fair will be held in Oman in December, Kassem

Oil prices could rise above $18

Gulf deserves higher quotas

NICOSIA, June 10, (Agencies): Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Hisham Nazersaid Gulf Araboil producers deserve higher production quotas in the future, the Saudi Press Agency reported yesterday. Nazer also said OPEC's new ceiling of 19.5 million barrels per day was below world demand and market prices could rise above $18 a barrel.

He made the remarks on Thursday after the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) ended six days of meetings in Vienna with a compromise price support agreement.

When asked about Saudi Arabia's differences with Kuwait over the distribution of quotas, Nazer was quoted as saying: "There is no difference over

"The kingdom agrees com-pletely with Kuwait that the Gulf Co-operation Council (GCC) states own the largest reserves in the OPEC and have sacrificed in the past more than others to rebalance the market, and therefore should be rewarded somehow for what they have lost in the past."

He was referring to the regional alliance which groups OPEC members Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates with non-OPEC members Bahram and Oman.

Nazer said new quotas should be distributed in the future according to a study which he predic-ted would lead to raising the quota of the kingdom and GCC states, the agency reported.

OPEC, which raised its ceiling by one million barrels daily, agreed to meet again on September 22 in Paris.

But Kuwait, which demands a higher individual quota, voiced its reservation about the deal.

The Kuwaiti oil minister is one of the most experienced people on market conditions and he said he will not use his reservation to confuse the market...and that is a positive indicator, Nazer was quoted as saying. Kuwait's Oil Minister, Sheikh

Ali Al Khalifa, has said his country was not bound by its OPEC assigned quota of 1.09 million daily and it would keep output around 1.35 million, a drop from its May production of 1.9

Nazer, whose country is the world's largest oil exporter, said Riyadh was happy to see OPEC mark price and not as a target selling price.

The price should be left to supply and demand forces...the kingdom sees no obstacles for the price exceeding $18 if the market demand justifies it," he said, adding that the OPEC accord will eventually have a positive impact on the market.

Kuwait's decision to raise its oil production quota to a mini-mum of 1.35 million barrels per day (BPD) follows an "inner tacit approval" by all ministers taking part in the recent Organ-isation of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna, according to a senior source of the organisation in Vienna today.

The source told KUNA that Kuwait's signing of a new OPEC accord was tied by reservation only in respect of the manner of distributing individual quotas and recent increase in the production ceiling rather than the overall ceiling of 19.5 million BPD or the benchmark price of $18 per barrel of crude. The OPEC source, who sought anonymity, indicated that Kuwait's announcement of its new production quota cannot be considered in violation of the accord, "because all ministers present accepted reasons of Kuwait's reservations in respect of share distributions and have signed the agreement which contained Kuwait's formal reservation on the first clause dealing with distribution of produc-

OPEC fails to tackle touchy problems

VIENNA, Austria, June 10, (AP): OPEC nations worked out a deal to try to keep crude prices strong at their meeting in Vienna this week but failed to tackle problems weakening the organisation's grip on the oil

"A lot of problems were swept under the carpet," said Fergus MacLeod, analyst at Barclays de Zoete Wedd brokerage firm in Ministers of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries promised to meet again in September and take a hard look at some persistent woes.

Indonesia's Oil Minister, Ginandjar Kartasasmita, predicted the meeting would be "crucial for the history of OPEC." The organisation settled on raising its production cap from the current 18.5 million barrels a day to 19.5 million barrels. Its benchmark price was held to $18 a 42-gallon barrel. It divided the one million-barrel increase in production proportionately, raising each member's supply quota a certain amount.

Analysts estimate OPEC is already producing about 21 barrels a day. So the countries would have to rein in sales to meet the new target. The oil markets' initial reaction was one of scepticism. Crude prices in the United States took a dive but then recovered somewhat.

Michael Rothman, senior energy analyst at Merrill Lynch capital markets financial firm in New York, said the agreement injects "a dose of pessimism because it signals OPEC is unable to deal with the quota "It does not bode well for prices (in the short term)," he sid.

He said prices for West Texas Intermediate, the American benchmark crude, could slip into the range of $15 to 17 a barrel in the July-

ILO urged to adopt fair debt deal

GENEVA, June 10, (KUNA): Kuwait has urged the International Labour Organisation (ILO) to adopt a fair and practical solution for the chronic debts crisis which threatens the developing nations and depletes their resources.

The call was contained in the address delivered by Kuwaiti Minister of Social Affairs and Labour Sheikh Nasser Mohamned Al-Sabah at the 76th session of the ILO, currently held here.

Sheikh Nasser drew attention to HH the Amir's address delivered last September at the UN General Assembly which contained proposals aiming at solving economic crises of developing countries emanating from heavy debts.

The minister called on the developing nations to bypass their faults and to eschew involvement in the trap of indebptedness and non-productive expenditure.

The economic measures stipulated by the International Monetary Fund result in political unrest and troubles in the developing nations and negatively affect the life of the peoples. Sheikh Nasser underlined.

UK trade team for China

Visit still on the cards

LONDON, June 10, (Reuter): The turmoil in China has not scared off British firms eager for business in the largely untapped Chinese market and a British trade mission still plans to go ahead with a visit there in Representatives of 100 firms scheduled the trip on the basis of a newly signed £3 billion ($5 billion) six-year trade deal with China, the biggest between the two countries. The Confederation of British Industry (CBI), whose president Sir Trevor Holdsworth will lead the delegation, and a group of companies pecialising in trade with China said the visit was still on the cards although the situation in China was under constant review.

Britain has frozen military sales to China and cancelled ministerial engagements with Peking in protest against the military crackdown on pro-democracy students in Peking but it stopped short of imposing economic sanctions.

British Foreign Secretary Sir Goeffrey Howe has said the question of non-military exports to China would be kept under consideration. The Sino-British Trade Council in London said a planned all-British exhibition in Peking involving 130 British companies was also going "I think we will remain very serious about exploiting the market in China," a spokesman said. With the ink barely dry on the new trade agreement, which could treble the value of bilateral trade, firms involved in projects in China say they see no reason to withdraw from a market which was so long closed to Western investment.

"China is an important market for us and one we intend to continue participating in," said Nick Salmon, general manager of GEC Turbine Generators Ltd power stations division. GEC Turbine, a wholly owned subsidiary of General Electric Co PLC of Britain, is supplying turbines to two power stations in China, and is one of dozens of British companies involved in major projects

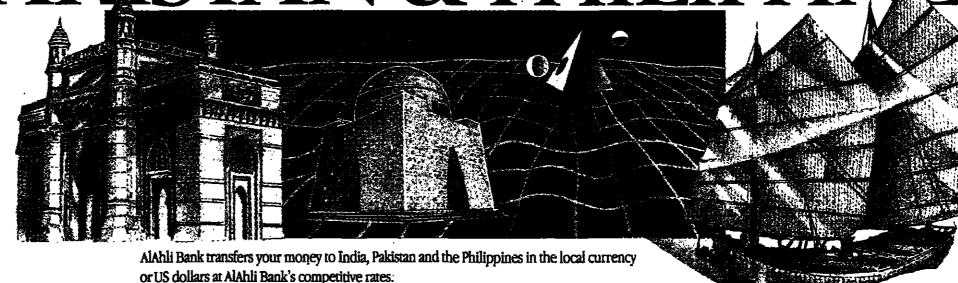

A council spokesman said British firms were looking at the situation in China but seemed reluctant to make snap decisions. There is no feeling that they are going to change their attitude to China in the short term. The main line seems to be wait-and-see and when normality is resumed they'll go back into the market," he said.

China rates 10th on the list of British trade partners. Official trade figures show Britain exported £412 million ($684 million) of goods to China last year and imported £444 million ($737 million) worth.

British exports include power generating equipment, special machin-ety, scientific equipment, textile fibres and organic chemicals while Wina supplies manufactured articles, textile yarns, fabric, clothing, fibres and animal feed.

In addition British companies such as Cable and Wireless PLC, whose share price suffered last week because of the company's heavy exposure on the Hong Kong Stock Market, are involved in telecommunications in China and Hong Kong.

Bush to propose big cut in sulphur dioxide emissions

WASHINGTON, June 10, (AP): President George Bush is ready to propose legislation requiring a 10-million ton reduction in sulphur dioxide emissions by the end of the century to combat acid rain, sources say.

The proposal is expected to be part of a far-reaching rewrite of the 1970 clean air act that Bush will unveil Monday. He was spending the weekend at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Maryland, putting finishing touches on the package.

Bush's expected proposal for cutting sulphur dioxide — emitted mainly by coalfired power plants and identified as a main ingredient in forming acid rain - is not quite as tough as the 12-million ton reduction advocated by environmentalists.

But it was far stronger than utilities and other coal-burning industries have advocated --- and represents a dramatic turnabout from the previous administration's resistance to any new standards for controlling acid rain.

Presidential Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush had made "preliminary decisions" on the clean-air package, but would make up his mind on some of the touchier issues this weekend while at Camp David.

"He is taking with him decision memos and options on all the major questions that are still outstanding, and we would expect decisions over the weekend," Fitzwater

Among the decisions still to be resolved, presumably, are whether Bush's package will set new standards for automobile tailpipe exhausts.

Administration officials, perhaps signalling a decision against tighter tailpipe emission standards, have stressed in recent days that the Bush package would put heavy emphasis on alternative auto fuels - like alcohol blends - that contain fewer contaminants.

After unveiling the clean-air package on Monday, Bush was to showcase it on a two-day trip west, with clean-air speeches planned for Wyoming and Nebraska.

Cutting sulphur dioxide in the air by 10 million tons by the year 2000, as Bush was expected to recommend, would reduce the contaminant to roughly half current levels. Acid rain is formed when sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxides combine with water in the atmosphere to form acid that returns to earth in rainfall, snow and dust. Midwestern utilities that burn high-sulphur coal without technological controls are generally agreed to be the chief sources of much of the acid rain downwind of them, damaging forests and lakes in Canada and the northeast.

Bush also is considering a reduction in nitrous oxide emissions, another component of acid rain that primarily comes from electric utility plants and automobiles. Nitric acid is suspected of causing some kinds of forest damage.

Strong dollar puts stocks in the money

NEW YORK, June 10. (AP): While takeovers and falling interest rates have been getting most of the credit for the stock market's buoyant showing in recent weeks, many analysts say it also owes a lot to the strength of the dollar in foreign exchange.

The dollar's rise against such other key currencies as the Japanese yen and the West German mark has helped attract international investors into US

Beyond that, it has been widely welcomed as a sign of increasing optimism about the overall outlook for the American econ-

Economy remains sufficiently robust

THE dollar markets waited in quiet anticipation for the PPI number at the end of the week. Earlier, with the unrest in China the dollar benefited by its safe haven status and irrespective of the partial easing in Fed funds rate and lower bank prime rates, the US unit was adequately underpinned, according to NBK weekly money market reports.

As anticipated the inflationary concerns have yet to subside with the PPI number larger than the market expected. With the number ruling out a further easing in monetary policy for the time being. the dollar railied. The dollar end the week at DM2.00 and yen 146.2.

Consumer credit rose a seasonally adjusted $2.73 billion in April following a revised increase of $3.69 billion in March. This indicates an annualised growth rate of 4.7 per cent and was considerably lower than the market forecasts.

Producer price index rose a greater than anticipated 0.9 percent compared with a 0.4 percent increase in April and 6.2 per cent year on year.

Although longer term "we still maintain that activity will slow, there is plenty of evidence that the economy remains sufficiently robust at present, with the Commerce Department's survey on business investment this week continuing to emphasise strong investment for the months ahead. Consequently the Federal Reserve will require evidence that the rate of inflation is slowing before continuing with its relaxation of monetary policy. Consumer spending and the retail sales data due out this coming week will be keenly watched to provide a cleaner indication of the inflationary trends. We still maintain that price rises remain in the pipeline and we have probably yet to see inflation peak."

The other major economic indicator for next week is merchandise trade and whilst the market is anticipating a slightly higher deficit a lower number may result. This reflects the "J" curve operating in reverse whereby the dollar's recent strength would have driven export values higher and eased the Equities and gilts rallied strongly following a depressed week reflecting a reduction in tension over Sterling.

The pound ended the week at: DM3.10 and £

A batch of data releases coming out for this forthcoming week will be keenly awaited to provide evidence as to the inflationary environment. However the chancellor's comments of this week that he expects inflation to rise higher before falling back, should be taken seriously.

"We indeed have maintained for some time that inflationary pressure in the pipeline could in fact see prices hit double figures before falling and then not substantively. With next week's data releases likely to confirm this trend and taken with the rise in consumer credit, a further increase in interest rates may be deemed necessary.

With the chancellor reiterating his commitment to fighting inflation with the possibility of higher interest rates, this has for the time being dissuaded downward pressure in sterling.

However as "we reiterate time and time again that a currency that has become increasingly sensitive to interest rates remains vulnerable on the downside to an expanded current account deficit and above OECD average prices.

US wholesale inflation jumps

Food prices expected to flatten out

WASHINGTON, June 10, (Reuter): US wholesale inflation jumped a sharp 0.9 per cent last month, much higher than economists had predicted.

The May increase in the producer price index for finished goods followed a moderate 0.4 per cent rise in April, the Labour Department said. It was far above economists' estimates of a 0.5 per cent increase. Leading the sharp rise was an 0.8 per cent jump in food prices, which had declined 0.6 per cent in

Austria to expand trade ties with Gulf VIENNA, June 10, (KUNA): An Austrian economic delegation will start tomorrow a tour of the Gulf region to explore possibilities of expanding business relationship between Austria and the Gulf states, trade sources said today.

An Austrian Chamber of Commerce and Industry spokesman said today that the delegation, includes representatives of 12 industrial establishments and the largest Austrian bank, will visit Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) to look into more trade facilities in these Gulf states.

The delegation is scheduled to meet with a number of senior economic and financial officials of the two states, in both public and private sectors, and discuss ways of boosting Austrian indus-trial exports to Saudi Arabia and the UAE.

Saudi Arabia is currently trying to develop its industrial sector through diversifying production and national revenues resources to avoid reliance merely on revenues of the crude oil, which, the spokesman said, provides Austria good oppor-tunities to elevate its exports of semi-processed and investment commodities.

The Austrian export to Saudi Arabia last year reached 2.1 billion schilling which includes industrial machinery, chemical products and other com-

Japan to give more aid to India

Japan will increase the overseas development aid (ODA) to India as part of its policy to allocate more economic assistance and facilitate transfer of technologies to developing countries.

This was announced by Japanese Ambassador to India Eijiro Noda at the twelfth joint meeting of the standing committees of India and the Japanese business corporation committee here yes-

The meeting was attended by high-level business delegations of the two countries. The Japanese side was led by chairman of the Japanese Standing Committee Saboro Aoki and the Indian side was led by R.P. Goenka. The delegations expressed concern over the protective undertones in the signing of the US-Canada free trade agreement and the progress towards the 1992 unified European market. "Free trade is a must for the economic development of Third World countries and Japan will assertively assist in the development of free trade based on GATT structure."

Aoki said Japanese invest-ment in India would increase as the "fast channel" had started yielding results. He said Japanese investments

Americans lag

says lawmaker

in fighting drugs,

LONDON, June 10, (AP): A British lawmaker charged in parliament yesterday that American sports organisations are lagging in the fight against drugs and suggested the NCAA begin year-round drug testing of football players at major US colleges.

Robert Hayward, a member of the House of Commons, said the world-wide battle to rid sports of drugs cannot succeed unless the United States stops talking and starts acting against the problem.

American society at present that they are tackling the problem of drugs in society and in sport.

That is not the case," said

Hayward, a member of the ruling

Conservative Party from Bristol

Hayward ridiculed recent calls by the Athletics Congress, the body overseeing US track and field, and other American sports organisations for increased drug action, saying its approval last weekend of joint American-Soviet testing of athletes is inadequate.

HOUSTON, June 10, (Reuter): US double Olympic champion Carl Lewis says he disagrees with the way US athletics authorities handle drug tests, arguing that it might lead to charges of a coverup.

In a telephone interview with Reuters this week, Lewis also said he did not like the way the Athletics Congress (TAC) marketed the sport but denied these were the reasons he was skipping the June 15-17 National Championships in Houston. On the drug issue, Lewis said he was upset because TAC did not employ an independent agency to conduct and monitor its drug testing at all levels.

"I think that can result in the talk of possible coverups (of failed drug tests)," he said. "I think TAC is committed to solving the drug problem," Lewis added, "but I think the best way would be to have an independent agency handle the tests."

With only the final tournament in Skelleftea, Sweden, to go in the Cup series, Karpov is still some twenty points behind Kasparov, but with Karpov beating one opponent after the other in Rotterdam he might even overtake the world champion in the standings for the

Hearns aims for end to nightmare

LAS VEGAS, June 10. (Reuter): Tommy Hearns is hoping an eight-year nightmare will end when he attempts to take Sugar Ray Leonard's World Boxing Council (WBC) super-midieweight title on Monday.

The odds are against him here with bookmakers laying 3-1 on Leonard for their first encounter since September 1981.

Leonard, slightly behind on points at that meeting, erupted in the 14th round to stop hearns for what was then his first defeat as a professional.

"It's been a definite nightmare, over and over again." Hearns said this week. "I've been living with pain for eight years. It's like a little monster following me around. It never left me and now it's time to relieve my

To rid himself of the monster Hearns. 30, will have to improve on his last three bouts.

Last October Argentine Juan Roldan had Hearns in serious trouble before the "hit man," from Detroit stopped him in the fourth round. In his next fight, Iran Barkley, bleeding badly and far behind, shocked Hearns with a brutal third-round knockout to win the WBC middleweight title.

Then in a comeback fight, Hearns was nearly knocked out by American James Kinchen. Hearns survived by hanging on to everything in sight — Kinchen, the refree and the ropes until he recovered to gain a points decision. Promoter Bob Arum says Leonard, 32, is assured of $14

"This (re-match) is the greatest thing that can happen to me," Hearns said.

Leonard, who has retired several times since 1982 when a detatched retina appeared to end his career, needs the spotlight and the competition.

"Boxing is not my priority, just my life," said Leonard, whose only defeat was to Panama's Roberto Duran in 1980. He avenged the defeat later that

After his partner's strong opening bid, which showed a balanced 23-24 points, North used the Stayman convention in an attempt to find a 4-4 heart fit. When he found none, he leaped straight to where he wanted the hand to be played.

West attacked with a heart, and declarer could count 11 fast tricks. The spade finesse was there to be taken, so most declarers wasted no time. They won the first trick in dummy and led the jack of spades to the queen and West's king. 'Twas a sad tale-they started and ended with 11 tricks when there were 12 to be taken, as the cards lay. There was plenty of time for the spade finesse—if that was going to work, declarer would always come to 12 tricks. The club suit offered an additional chance for the fulfilling trick, but it had to be tried before declarer tackled spades.

One declarer who saw this possibility was Michael Valentine, owner of the new Ace Point Backgammon and Chess Club in New York City. He won the first trick in hand and immediately led a low club toward the queen. If West had the king, as was the case here, dummy's queen would become the extra trick declarer desperately needs. If West played low and the queen lost to the king, declarer would win any return and then cash all his winners outside the spade suit, taking care to end up on the table. He would then fall back on the spade finesse, and his club play would have cost nothing.

game to post their second win and take the lead in Group B in the ongoing KAPILKU basketball tournament.

The Nissan quintet put up a good fight; but the effective Garcia-Dingson combination, getting support from EEI's old hands Barcelona and Lugo, and rookie Molina, broke Nissan's defences. The Nissan quintet came close to within 2 points at the start of the second half. EEI unleashed a fast-break play and surged to a 10 points lead with 6 minutes to go. They kept on the fast-break rampage and never allowed the Nissan quintet a breather until the final buzzer signalling the end of the game and victory for EEI-Kamish.

Top scorers on the EEI-Kamish side were Dingson (30), Garcia (26), and Barcelona (17); while on the Nissan side Juan lead all scorers with 32 points. Detera and Quiambao had 20 and 12 points respectively. In the other games, Hatid Ligaya-Abugosh gained their second win and took the lead in Group A, when they beat Kuwait International Hotel, 88-70. The KIH five, whose spirits were kept alive throughout the game by their all-female rooters, came to within 10 points in the last 9 minutes of the game, but Hatid Ligaya's fluid co-ordination and welltimed fielding of players paid off and stopped KIH's rally.

Baclagan led the scorers for Hatid Ligaya with 23 points, with

17-year-old Spaniard wins French Open

PARIS, June 10, (Reuter): Seventh seed and rank outsider Arantxa Sanchez of Spain upset the hot favourite and world number one Steffi Graf of West Germany to win the women's singles final at the French Open today. The 17-year-old Sanchez won 7-6 (8-6) 3-6 7-5 in an incredible match which lasted two minutes short of three hours to replace Graf as the youngest-ever winner of the Roland Garros title.

Graf, winner of the last two Paris tournaments, had her run of five successive Grand Slam titles halted by the gutsy Span-iard who kept running in the third set even though she was visibly exhausted.

A tearful Sanchez said afterwards: "I beat the number one in the world. (Michael) Chang beat (Ivan) Lendl so I thought why not. I'm very happy because this is a wonderful day for me."

Graf, who looked jaded throughout and was apparently suffering from a stomach upset, left the court when trailing 6-5 in the final set but returned after about two minutes.

Rain delayed the start of the final by about 20 minutes. Sanchez, the seventh seed, the first Spanish woman to reach the final in Paris, survived three break points in her first two

Schwantz takes pole position

RIJEKA, Yugoslavia, June 10, (Reuter): Kevin Schwantz upstaged title holder Eddie Lawson and Championship leader Wayne Rainey to clinch his fourth consecutive pole position for tomorrow's Yugoslav 500cc Motorcycling Grand Prix.

The American trio had the fastest times after today's second and final practice session, with Schwantz taking pole spot on his Suzuki by virtue of the one minute 29.164 seconds he recorded

Although he did not improve on that time in his two rides yesterday, it came under pressure from both Yamaha rider Rainey and Lawson on his Honda.

Rainey, who leads the championship by 11 points from second-placed Lawson after seven of 15 races, improved to 1:29.257 to start from the second spot on the grid.

Californian triple world champion Lawson, who switched from Yamaha this year, struggled to match Schwantz's and Rainey's supremacy in bends and recorded the third fastest time of 1:29.603.

West German chiefs scrap controversial soccer plans

FRANKFURT, West Germany, June 10, (Reuter). West German soccer chiefs scrapped controversial plans for the domestic game yesterday after police protested that they would lead to more violence on the terraces.

The West German Soccer Association (DFB) voted against proposals made by League and club officials for a major shakeup of the Bundesliga points system from next season, aimed at making the game more entertain-

DFB advisory board chair-man Hermann Neuberger said the proposed format for the first and second divisions was not feasible. "These proposals were never practical from the safety point of view and the playing point of view," he said.

Faced by a drop in average Bundesliga attendances to 18,000, the worst in 15 years, the League made recommendations last month to make the game more interesting by making teams play each other at home and away on consecutive weeks. The League wanted to award a bonus point to the aggregate winner of the two matches with away goals counting double.

If the teams remained level after the two games, a penalty shootout would have decided who took the extra point. But the new format has come under heavy fire since it was announced. National coach Franz Becken-baur labelled it as "conception of clueless folk." The West German Police Union sent a telex to the DFB just a few hours before yesterday's meeting warning them that the new proposals would lead to more trouble on the

"The short time between the matches is not enough to cool off any emotion or aggression from the first match," it said.

Rono and Ereng 4 lose in Madrid athletics meet

MADRID, June 10, (Reuter): Kenyan Olympic champions Peter Rono and Paul Ereng crashed to surprise defeats in an international athletics meeting yesterday as world champion Abdi Bile of Somalia showed a glimpse of his best.

Bile, back on the track year of injury problems, clocked two minutes 20.49 seconds to reassert his position among the world's top middle-distance athletes with victory in a 1,000 metres event ahead of Spain's Manuel Pancorbo with Ereng

Olympic 800 metres champion Ereng followed his usual style by staying at the back of the pack but left himself too much to do in the final lap as Bile, 1,500 metres gold medailist from the Rome World Championships, took command. Rono, the Olympic 1,500 metres champion, also finished third behind fellow Kenyan Kipkoech Cheruiyot in the mile. a slow battle for position which saw Cheruiyot win in three minutes 56.36 seconds, more than ten seconds off the world record.

Rono clocked 3:59.51 behind second-placed Dutchman Mongens Guldberg.
Indoor world champion Javier

Sotomayor of Cuba won the high jump convincingly with a leap of 2.35 metres but gave up an attempt on his own world record of 2.43 metres when he brought the bar down heavily at the first attempt.
